"Cupid seems to have possession of our wires," said Gates, "and we are now training double the usual number of students. We have no difficulty in getting new girls as telephone service is attractive to them because hello girls get married, but we never had such an epidemic before."

William Sulzer is the son of a German political exile who came to America in 1851. As a Heidelberg student he had joined the revolution of 1848. He settled in Elizabeth, N. J., and became a contractor. He married a girl of Irish descent. The present governor of New York was born March 18. 1863.

A Thorough Tammany Man. Young Sulzer went to New York with his father and was educated there in the public schools and the Columbia Law school. He was admitted to the bar in 1884. Almost immediately he became active in politics. He joined Tammany Hall and soon was recognized as one of its most devoted workers. In 1889 he was elected to the state assembly as a Democrat and was returned each year until 1894. Sulzer had been a candidate for governor several times before he finally obtained the nomination and election. In 1898 he came out for Bryan. Also he was after the governorship. John C. Sheehan, then leader of Tammany, threw the organization strength away from Sulzer to chastise the latter for supporting Bryan. After that he went back to Tammany and until the recent break has worked in harmony with the machine.

He has always been fond of declaring his love for the common people of the nation. At times that seems to be an obsession with this. "Let the people rule," is his tavorife platitude. Or this: "I am a man of the people. I have very little vanity, but I am a Democrat unfafraid and I form my opinion in silent hours when I think what is best for all." He declared the executive mansion at Albany should be known as "the people's house" while he occupied it.

Governor Sulzer was married in 1908. His wife was Miss Clara Rodelman, whom he met at the Vina Foote Home for Graduate Nurses in New York. His woolng was brief and romantic. The marriage took place at the couple's third meeting.
